FIRE DROVE COWBOYS DOWN MAUNA LOA

HERDERS IN COL. NORRIS' RANCH HAD TO RIDE DOWN THE MOUNTAIN LAST MONTH WHEN MOKUAWEOWEO BROKE FORTH INTO FIERY WARNING—KINAU ARRIVES TODAY WITH NEWS FROM HILO.

The following is an extract from a letter received today by Frank S. Dodge, of the Bishop estate, from E. D. Baldwin, government surveyor at Hilo: "Mauna Loa is in eruption again and a flow is in progress from a point near the top amongst the small cones on the Kahuku side. We saw the glow, and lava flow clearly last night from our house (at Puno) for the first time."

Puno is about 35 miles from the scene of the eruption. Cow boys on Col. Norris' Kahuku ranch on the big island of Hawaii were driven down the slopes of Mauna Loa by an eruption of fire last month. The same eruption that Captain Mosher of the steamer Iwalani reported is the one that drove the cow boys to the lower slopes of the big mountain.

Last Monday when Captain Mosher was at Kau he was talking with several people over the eruption that he had seen. The story received corroboration from a very unexpected quarter. W. Wilhelm, one of the old cow boys on the Kahuku ranch, stated that he had seen that eruption of fire from Mokuaweoweo. The cow boys had seen the fire and it had caused them to rush down the slopes of the mountain toward the lower levels as it feared the lava would start flowing. Wilhelm stated moreover that there had been two eruptions of fire from the mountain during the last two months. The occurrence of the last eruption when Col. Norris' cow boys hurried down the mountain was recalled distinctly by the people at Kau.

The steamer Kinau arrived this morning from Hilo with the latest Hilo accounts of the eruption of Mauna Loa. A number of passengers returned on her from visiting the Volcano House. Every body was delighted with the view witnessed from that part of the island, although no flowing lava could be seen from that part of Hawaii. A single column of fire could be witnessed. The fire was still playing Thursday night when quite a party from the Kinau including Admiral Beckley, visited the Volcano House. People at the Volcano House stated that there had been a display of fire every night.

Admiral Beckley states that thus far, no one has arrived at Hilo from the immediate vicinity of the eruption. A large excursion party was to have left Hilo today for Mokuaweoweo. Fully fifty people would compose this crowd it was thought. This party will go to the Volcano House and from there make their way on horse back and on foot to the summit of the mountain.

Nothing definite in the way of news was learned regarding the lava flow. The lava flow could not be seen from Hilo or the Volcano House. Admiral Beckley said that he thought the "pillar" that was seen from the Kilauea House was a fountain of lava playing out of the summit crater. The two other eruptions were not viewed from that side of the island.

Much interest was taken in the report of the lava flowing. The officers of the steamer seemed to think that lava was undoubtedly flowing, but thus far, no one about Hilo appears to have seen it.

Captain Freeman, the master of the Kinau, was on the bridge this morning and witnessed the reflection from the volcano. This fact showed that there was still activity at Mokuaweoweo. The masters of the steamers Nihua and Ke Au Hou which returned from Kauai ports last night did not see any reflection.

A number of people departed from Honolulu last evening on the steamer Iwalani for Punaluu and Honouuauli to witness the outbreak. If anybody books today the steamer Helene which is to sail for Hanalei ports at 4 p. m. may be sent to Hilo with passengers.

The following accounts of the outbreak are given by the Hilo papers. The Tribune says, under date of October 5:

"Mokuaweoweo, the slumbering crater on Mauna Loa forty-five miles from Hilo has become wide awake. The awakening came at 12:45 p. m. Tuesday last. Great volumes of smoke arose from the higher summit of Mauna Loa and observers knew that the expected had happened. Tuesday night the reflected glare from the clouds above Mokuaweoweo was seen as far as Lahaina and Molokai. The people on the leeward side of this island were witnesses of a magnificent play of the fire lights shooting upward from the crater, and telling of the boiling river that were seeking an outlet."

"Two Hawaiians employed on a dairy high up on the other side, reported Wednesday morning that the lava had broken over the rim and was rolling down in six streams toward Kahuku ranch. After some time these six streams merged into one."

Thursday morning, Manager Bidgood of the Volcano House reported that during the night before, the illumination above the big mountain was a splendid spectacle. The employees at Pahala plantation seem to have the superior point of view. Wednesday night they viewed the burning mountain top through long hours. Their report is that the flow is making its way along the main crest of Mauna Loa toward South Kona and that from their observation, they estimated the flow to have reached a length of from 12 to 15 miles. The progress of the flow as against the night before was plain.

"Sunday morning a party will leave Pahala to get a close view. A trail leads up the mountain from Pahala over which the trip can be made in fourteen or fifteen hours on horseback. The outbreak has caused great excitement but no apprehension and the general expressed hope is that the activity will continue all winter. When the flow of lava reaches lower and more accessible levels, large numbers of people will go over to the other side to see the show."

The Herald says: "Shortly after noon on Tuesday Manager Bidgood of the Kilauea Volcano House telephoned the Herald office that an immense volume of smoke was issuing from the big crater at the top of Mauna Loa."

"The day was perfectly clear at Kilauea and the smoke and steam was plainly visible from the verandas at Kilauea. Attaches of the hotel who have been in that vicinity for years say they never before saw so much smoke coming from the upper crater."

"During Tuesday night the glow over the crater was tremendous in area indicating one of the most extensive

WERE TRIED BY COURT MARTIAL

TWO SOLDIERS GIVEN HEAVY SENTENCES AND FINED BY AUTHORITIES ON SHERMAN.

There was a court martial aboard the transport Sherman during most of yesterday. Two soldiers T. Sheekey and G. Connelly, were being tried under the Articles of War. Both were convicted and sentenced to three months imprisonment and a fine of $30.

The case against Sheekey was serious and it was through the efforts of the local officers, especially Police and Humane Officer Benoit that the man was apprehended and convicted.

According to the testimony against Sheekey the soldier stopped a Chinese named Ah Yun near the corner of Hotel and Nuuanu streets Thursday night and proceeded to go through the pockets of the Chinese. The latter had spent all of his money before he met the soldier, so Sheekey did not get any cash. He beat the Chinese however. Officer Benoit worked up the case against the soldier. Special Patrolman Harris of Captain Bowers patrol also testified as did a police officer. The Chinese testified. Both of the soldiers were arrested, officer Benoit taking Sheekey into custody. The United States authorities agreed to prosecute the men if the police would release the prisoners. The High Sheriff allowed the soldiers to be released. Connelly was convicted of being drunk and disorderly.

The provision for control of the issue by the majority bond holders, about which there was a good deal of litigation in the local courts not long ago, is in both the deeds. It is provided that a majority shall have the right to foreclose, etc.

The deeds were executed by S. M. Damon as president and W. M. Alexander as treasurer, of Haiku and Paia plantations, and by E. D. Tenney and J. R. Galt president and secretary of the trust company. All their land holdings in fee and under lease, are conveyed by the plantations, also various franchises and other property.

THE RACES IN THE JURY BOX

KAMUELA JURORS OFFENDED AT AN OLD AND LEGALIZED CONSIDERATION.

The Kamuela jury question will come up before Judge Gear on Monday morning, but no one seems to know what should or can be done. The jurors' kick against a suggestion that the question of race was considered by the attorneys during the selection of the jurors to try the case, is a surprise to most lawyers, for there have been few juries sworn in in the courts here for many years, in which the lawyers did not take into consideration the race question.

The fact that race might exert an unconscious influence on jurors was so thoroughly recognized in the courts, in fact, that a law was passed as follows:

"All native Hawaiians, accused of any crime, shall be tried by a jury composed entirely of natives; and all foreigners by a jury composed entirely of foreigners, who shall be drawn from the array of native and foreign jurors respectively, returned to serve at the term."

Section 1331 of the civil code said: "In all cases in which one party is a native Hawaiian and the other a foreigner (alien or naturalized), the jury shall be composed of an equal number of natives and foreigners."

Practice under these laws continued throughout the islands up to the time when the Organic act made them illegal. Attorneys, however, have always recognized them more or less. "In any country," said a local member of the bar, "a lawyer defending a client would consider it an advantage, other things being equal, to secure a juror of the same nationality as his client. This doesn't imply any theory of unfairness or bias, but simply that there may be a slight, unconscious sympathy which naturally affects a man in reaching evidence."

It is the general opinion of those who have watched the work of the courts, in spite of the line that is often drawn by attorneys, that the race issue actually cuts little or no figure in the jury room. United States Judge Estee, whose juries are always mixed, has frequently commented upon them as unusually good material for juries. An instance was furnished yesterday afternoon in the case of the Bishop estate against Lullia. The plaintiff is a Hawaiian woman of some years, who has occupied a home for a long period of time and the plaintiff was required to prove title to the property, in order to eject her, by a long and complicated fight over evidence. A jury on which there were several Hawaiians, however, found an unanimous verdict in less than an hour, against the occupant of the home and in favor of the Bishop estate.

"I don't know what I shall do in the Kamuela matter," said Attorney General Andrews, to whom Judge Gear referred the matter. "You can say that I am considering the case."

MRS. JONES AND WIDOW SMITH.

Mrs. Jones had ten dollars to spare and she used it to buy a handsome mirror. Widow Smith secured ten dollars together and bought a fire insurance policy for $1,000 on her furniture. A fire destroyed the block in which both lived. Mrs. Jones was left mirrorless, with only her husband's wages to replace what was lost. The insurance company gave Widow Smith a thousand dollars and she was soon set up in housekeeping again. The right kind of fire insurance policies can be had from Henry Waterhouse Trust Co.
